

Galloya & Kubuneh Urban Art & Culture Experience

📍 Galloya & Kubuneh Street Art Gallery, West Coast Region, The Gambia

Wander through Galloya and Kubuneh's open-air galleries, where entire streets have become canvases for Gambian artists. This half-day outing turns two unassuming West Coast communities into one of the country's most striking cultural surprises, and it rewards visitors who enjoy looking closely as much as those who simply enjoy a good walk. Your guide meets you at the gallery and sets the scene: how a handful of murals grew into a movement that now covers walls across both villages, painted by local and visiting artists alike. From there, you're free to wander the lanes at a relaxed pace, tracing stories of heritage, environmental care, women's empowerment and community life painted in colour on every corner. Along the way there's a good chance to meet the artists themselves, hear how a piece came together, and pick up details you'd otherwise miss walking past on your own. Photographers in particular tend to linger here, since every wall offers a different composition and the light through Galloya's narrow streets makes for some of the most rewarding shots on the coast. The pace stays unhurried throughout, with time built in simply to take it all in before heading back. Whether you come for the art, the culture, or the chance to see a side of The Gambia that rarely makes it onto a standard itinerary, Galloya and Kubuneh deliver something genuinely different.
